Here's a young Brush Turkey chick that looks like it's looking for food. Are its Mum and Dad going to help by feeding it?

Here's Dad. See the big yellow wattle around his neck.

Dad had been building a big mound nest of sticks and leaves for quite a few weeks.

Now here's Mum on the Mound Nest that Dad built. She's digging a hole in which to lay her eggs. The leaves in the mound keep her eggs warm until they are ready to hatch so she doesn't need to sit on the nest.

But when the chicks hatch and come out of the Mound Nest they are on their own. They have to find their own food without any help from Mum or Dad.
